7 Tips to Keep Cool in The Heat

AMA August 08' issue— submitted by Bill Blaquiére

The right gear and a little preparation will keep a smile on your face up to and beyond 100 degrees. Here are a few tips from Tom Mehren, event coordinator for Sportbike Northwest, to keep in mind:

Cover Up: It's easy to think you'll be cooler in a tank top and a half helmet. Not so. Full gear blocks the sun and can keep you cooler by controlling the evaporation of sweat. It's also safer.

Use an evaporative cooling vest: For years pragmatic riders were hip to the virtues of wetting down a long sleeved T-shirt under their gear, but that only works for a few minutes. A purpose-built evaporative cooling vest can keep you cool much longer. The better ones have zip off sleeves for extremely hot conditions. They work best under your gear.

Wear synthetics: A synthetic wicking T-shirt will do far more good than a stuffy cotton T-shirt— and it packs smaller. A padded wicking skin, similar to padded bicycle shorts, provides additional wicking to draw moisture away from the skin and keep you cool.

Keep your feet cool: Consider wicking, anti-microbial socks, heat-wicking insoles and foot powder. When used together, the results are impressive.

Hydrate: You should drink at least a few liters a day while in the saddle. Some like to use a bladder system like a Camel-Bak, others are content to drink at stops. However you do it, do it. Consider an electrolyte add-in instead of energy drinks, which contain a lot of sugar and caffeine.

Off the Bike: A flexible hat with a full brim all the way around (not a baseball cap) will keep the sun's rays off your face, head and neck.

A Email from Al & Lois Vogele— Rapid City, SD Bill and Cheryl

Thanks for the song. That is very cool. Was great to see you again as well as the others. Was great that we were there when you had a get together. What a great meeting place for a get together and with real good food. We are back home, now to get rested up again. The Colorado group and the Nebraska group kept Lois and I going the rest of the evenings along with the Rapid City group. Was great to see them also, but with working the show all day it sure makes a long day when you spend the evenings with the groups. Hope to see you guys again. Al
